

Center for Migration Research Lecture Series

Sujevy Vega Women & Gender Studies Arizona State University

Bypassing Borders: How Latinos Assert Belonging and Practice Home in the Heartland

Dr. Vega is an Assistant Professor in Women and Gender Studies and Affiliate Faculty, School of Transborder Studies and Religious Studies at Arizona State University. Her research explores the everyday lived experiences of Latina/os in the United States, particularly the Midwest. Her current research examines Latina women in the LDS Church.

Vega's talk will focus on the different mechanisms of asserting belonging like faith/religion practices, sports, and public advocacy on immigration. She will discuss how current political frames affect Latino everyday life in the Midwest.

February 7th, 12:00pm

Jayhawk Room,
Kansas Union

Please join us for a methodological chat at 2:30 in Fraser Hall 706 (McCluggage Room).