

The Department of American Studies at the University of Kansas is committed to training critical, interdisciplinary scholars whose work will change conversations on identity, community, and social justice. We learn from and about people who have been too often marginalized in society and in the academy, and engage with a variety of publics in our work.

Now accepting PhD applications for Fall 2020.
Apply by January 10 to qualify for competitive funding packages!